> pect of this tariff question, for there is more ision in the Republican party on this subject than there ever was in the Democratic rty. The Western States were held in line by the Republicans with the promise of tariff reform on the Allison plan, which differed but slightly from the Mills bill. It is already evident, says the St. Paul Globe. that the Allison bill will not be acceptable to the Eastern monopol sts, and if the meas-ure ever passes Congress it will have been so changed as not only to be unrecognizable by its framers, but it will be more advanced in the direction of an excessive tariff than the present law. In many instances the duties will be raised; in but few will they be lowered, and those on articles of but litthe importance; while many articles how on the free list will be added to the list of pro-
